

“Three Acres
& A Cow”

THE HOUND

Issue
I

Latest news and bulletin updates for the National Distributist Party

Tyler White

What is This?

This is the first edition of The Hound, which is intended to provide a sense of formality to discussions within our party, along with any other relevant news - whether it be regional or national - through the cheap means of a classic paper newsletter which has been inspired by the pamphleteers of the early 1800s (pamphleteer is a historical term for someone who creates or distributes pamphlets, unbound and therefore inexpensive booklets intended for wide circulation).

Members will be able to pitch suggestions for the sheet if they wish or write them themselves if the subject matter is relevant to Distributism, whether it be an essay or a reaction to recent news.

This first edition will be online only, however, if enough people are interested then we will be moving to a physical format via the mail.

The Hound will also publish the dates and times of all party events along with any other events deemed to be in our interest to attend.

The 'Hound & Torch' emblem was the symbol of the Guild of St Joseph and St Dominic, an early 20th c. Distributist community in Ditchling, Sussex.

Tyler White

Looking Towards the Future

How can you help?

As we are well underway into the latter half of 2022, it is a good idea to reflect on the past year and look towards the future of the party.

In December, the party will have been registered as a 'minor-party' for one year, which is a victory in of itself as we are possibly one of two political parties which have gone from a purely online soap box into a party which now takes action on the streets of Britain. This has occurred through our own party events and the activism of supporters who have volunteered their time and effort to hand out leaflets in their local communities, which I can only thank you for.

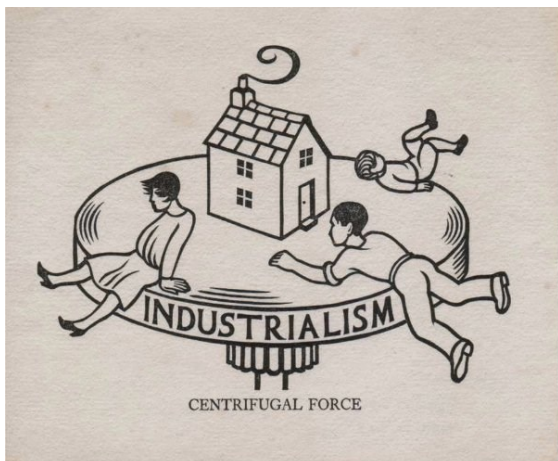

Last year we organised four meetups overall, those being Birmingham, Manchester, Oxford, and a Smaller one in Bristol. These meetups were mostly to create a sense of camaraderie, however, as we go into 2023, these will be based on street activism and are likely to take place in more rural locations as that is where our supporter base is more likely to be located. It will also be said that the pints and general carousing will come after the activism to reward all those who attended with a nice sit down, a crisp flagon of ale and a pack of only the saltiest pork scratchings.

In 2023, our goals are similar to this years, which is an increased focus on physical activism while still running our successful Instagram page which regularly outperforms smaller parties like UKIP, and sometimes outperforms established parties like the Lib-Dems and the Socialist Workers Party.

However, in 2023 we will attempt to get the party registered as a major party in preparation for the 2024 General Election, which if you're considering running for please contact us as soon as possible. On the subject of elections, it will be the 2023 Council Elections in May and we will be trying to target communities where people might stand for council election. If you wish to stand in your local area, Wikipedia has a good page that details all of the wards which will be up for election.

Finally, I would like to again say thank you to all the supporters and members who have contributed to this huge project in either their time, manpower, donations or purchases of our manifesto and other books which helps to keep the NDP running.

Thank you and God bless.

A Distributist cartoon by Philip Hargreen (1890 - 1988) - wood engraver

Upcoming Events:

The Mallard Conference -
01/10/22 - 8PM
Birmingham

NDP Conference -
24/10/22 - Birmingham

Reasoned Student Summit -
03/11/22 - London